Wurzel-Flummery

Harrison Ford is to receive the SAG-AFTRA (Screen Actors Guild – American Federation of Television and Radio Artists) Life Achievement Award for his acting and humanitarian career. (Deadline, 18 December)

R.F. Kuang withdrew from the Emirates Airline Festival of Literature (Dubai, 21-27 January) in response to a call for a UAE boycott because of the current atrocities in Sudan. (The Bookseller, 4 December) [SF²C]

Terry Pratchett anecdotes still keep turning up. The author of a memoir of High Wycombe Technical School bitterly recalls the games master's ruling that boys considered unfit for games owing to asthma etc. literally had to shovel coal instead. But our man found a younger pupil prepared to do the makework for a shilling, for which in 1960 'you could buy four Mars Bars or four packets of Smith's Crisps. [...] I think I can possibly lay claim to have given Terry Pratchett his first paid job.' (Stuart Rooksby, The High Wycombe Society Newsletter, Winter 2025)

David Walliams has been dropped by HarperCollins UK despite his status as a bestselling children's author, in the wake of 'allegations of inappropriate behaviour towards young women' which he strenuously denies. (BBC, 19 December) According to the Telegraph, 'Former [HC] staff also told this publication that they were told to work in "pairs" when meeting Walliams and were advised not to visit his home.' (19 December) Early repercussions include his removal from the list of speakers at the 2026 Waterstones Children's Book Festival. (BBC, 22 December)

Sylvia Townsend Warner of Lolly Willowes and Kingdoms of Elfin fame is now commemorated by a statue of her seated on a bench – with a cat familiar in attendance – unveiled in Dorchester, Dorset, in December. This followed a campaign asking for nominations of overlooked local women; she 'won by a landslide'. (Guardian, 12 December) [AIP]

Infinitely Improbable

As We See Us. '... the influence of pulp science on real science. It is an admission both shamefaced and proud that some large proportion of scientists claim inspiration from various crude blatherings they loved when young. Satellite scientists cite Arthur Clarke, biologists are drawn to the field by the neuro- and nanotech visions of entertainers. Above all, Roddenberry's leaden space-pioneering meant a demographic bulge of young physicists attempting to replicate replicators, tricorders, phasers and transporter rooms ...' (China Miéville, Kraken, 2010) [BA]

Awards. 2026 UK New Year Honours List: actor honorees with significant genre credits include Warwick Davis (OBE), Idrissa Akuna Elba (Knight Bachelor), Cynthia Erivo (MBE), Matt Lucas (OBE) and Meera Syal (Dame Commander of the Order of the British Empire).

For the Fan Who Has Everything. Arion Press offers an art book of two rare Asimov stories, 'Nightfall' and 'The Last Question': 'The Fine Press edition is limited to 210 copies for sale and printed by letterpress on 125 gsm Zerkall mouldmade. The book features three anthotype prints by the artist and five double-page spreads of Ebtekar's "Cloud" prints. Each copy is Smythe-sewn and square-backed, and presented in an imprinted handmade slipcase.' Only $1,575, and – as Flann O'Brien ended his spoof of such descriptions – a gory livid bleeding bargain at the price. [JDB]

Court Circular. Studio Gainax of Japan, noted for many anime productions including Shinseiki Evangelion (Neon Genesis Evangelion, 1995-1996), was formally dissolved on 10 December; they had filed for bankruptcy in May 2024. All IP rights have reportedly been transferred to rightful owners and creators. (Anime News Network, 10 December) [LP]

Award Shortlist. Prometheus Hall of Fame (libertarian classics): The Star Dwellers (1961) by James Blish, Brave New World (1932) by Aldous Huxley, That Hideous Strength (1945) by C.S. Lewis, Salt (2000) by Adam Roberts, Singularity Sky (2003) by Charles Stross. Perhaps Rudyard Kipling's 'As Easy as A.B.C.', shortlisted seventeen times for this award (2006-2025) without ever winning, has at last been put to rest.

Fanfundery. TransAtlantic Fan Fund: nominations for the 2026 race from North America to the Berlin Eurocon (MetropolCon, 2-5 July) are still open and will close on 1 February. For the official announcement at taff.org.uk, please see taff.org.uk/news/2026race.pdf. ● TAFF Books: no new announcements for once, but many thanks to everyone who bought fan-fund benefit paperbacks from the list at ae.ansible.uk/titles.php?taff. Such sales raised over £300 for TAFF and over £50 for GUFF in 2025.

SFWA announced changes to the Nebula Awards rules on 19 December, most significantly regarding use of what some call plagiarism engines: 'Works that are wholly written using generative large language model (LLM) tools are not eligible. / Works that used LLMs at any point during the writing process must disclose this upon acceptance of the nomination, and the nature of the technology's use will be made clear to voters on the final ballot.' As a crowd of outraged SFWA authors with pitchforks and flaming torches began to form, this was hastily revised: 'wholly' in the first sentence became 'either wholly or partially' and the last clause of the second became 'and those works will be disqualified'. [JS/F770] Many, many ensuing pro-AI and anti-AI posts are mercifully not summarized here.

The Dead Past. 20 Years Ago, the devout website balaams-ass.com (now defunct) exposed 'the darker and esoteric meanings of the Chronicles of Narnia', including the author's vile profanity: 'The word "ass" appears in 4 of the books. Being British, it probably did not mean the same to him as it does to Americans (as a swear word), but he could have left it out, especially since he only used it four times and did use "donkey" in other places. However, considering the filthy state of his mind, it is possible that he thought this cute.' (Ansible 222, January 2006) Why the site wasn't called balaams-donkey.com remains a profane mystery. ● 80 Years Ago, some possible fake news about the official magazine of the National Fantasy Fan Federation: 'The ink in which the National Fantasy Fans have been duplicated will fade out completely within a year unless sprayed with goat's milk. Speer has a large number of copies so treated, for which he will charge exorbitant prices for those who wish to have complete files of TNFF.' (Stefnews 28, January 1946, ed. Jack Speer)

The Dark Web. Following the death of its owner Rodger Turner in June 2025, the long-running SFsite.com – launched in 1997 – has at last ceased to function but is preserved at the Internet Archive. [AJ]

Random Fandom. Chris Barkley, following much legal and other hassle (see A461 with links to older Ansible coverage), has at last received the Hugo he won at the 2023 Chengdu Worldcon – sent by administrator Dave McCarty, who, despite being twice stripped of responsibilities by the DCFW holding company that planned to despatch the trophies itself, had begged one last chance to carry out his long-delayed duty. [F770] ● Fancylopedia.org has a not very threatening rival with the corresponding .net domain, whose entries seem to have been generated by a system trained on corporate-brochure puffery. Fandom's once notorious Claude Degler gets ten chapters analysing his various forms of 'excellence'; from 'Chapter 5: Social Dynamics and Community Excellence' we learn that 'Claude Degler social established revolutionary frameworks for community advancement while creating systematic approaches to social disruption that would influence fannish society through social methodology worthy of recognition as transformative achievement in community development deserving continued study and appreciation.' [CF/JDN] Well I never. I hardly dare read this site's ten-chapter exegesis of the Astral Leauge.

Magazine Scene. Copies of the delayed (under new management) Analog, Asimov's and F&SF have at last been seen in the wild. Some F&SF covers admit to 'Summer 2025'; others mysteriously say 'Volume I'. [CP]

Thog's Masterclass. Windmill Weather. 'The day was the quixotic sort, half-gloomy, half challenging.' (Roger Arcot, 'The Timeless Man', June 1956 Other Worlds) ● Scientific Units. 'According to this little instrument, we're heading for a pile of hydrogen gas!' 'Peters informed them that they were on the edge of a thick band of hydrogen, which seemingly stretched away for incalculable distances on all sides.' 'They were travelling at enormous speed towards the largest concentrated "blob" of hydrogen any of them had experienced, and they were hopelessly out of control!' 'Those terrible explosions that followed, causing us to be bumped all over the place, were due to large lumps of flaming hydrogen gas being flung from the disintegrating sun.' (Terence Haile, Galaxies Ahead, 1963) ● It's All Greek To Me. 'Doyle searched his memory; then he recognized it – a pentagram, with its circles and six-pointed star.' (Henry Kuttner, 'The Hunt', June 1939 Strange Stories) [LP]
