A Game with Shifting Mirrors

Ian McKellen was confronted with the greatest critical challenge of his entire acting career: 'Who would win a fight between Gandalf and Dumbledore?' 'Why on earth would they be fighting? But Gandy, of course, would win. The original wizard.' (Guardian, 7 May)

Charles Platt plans to launch a new sf magazine later this year, with an irregular schedule, POD production and the interesting name New Words. 'Since the title is somewhat similar to that of another magazine, it has been trademarked with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office.' All enquiries to newwordседitorial@gmail.com. (Email, 5 May)

Terry Pratchett's works are apparently teetering on the brink of oblivion, according to someone called Helen Lewis: 'One of England's funniest writers is in danger of being lost to history.' (The Atlantic, May)

Lynne M. Thomas and Michael Damian Thomas of Uncanny Magazine fame were amicably divorced on 2 April, leaving Uncanny solely owned by the latter. [L]

Richard van der Voort's estate hopes to sell the stock of his bookshop At the Sign of the Dragon in Wigtown, Scotland: 'over 33,000 items' including sf/fantasy books, magazines and comics plus general-interest books and DVDs. Enquiries to transformerbooks0@gmail.com. [SB]

Infinitely Improbable

As Others See Us. On an all-male US book club: 'Whoever is hosting chooses the book, and on this day it was Michael Slott's turn. The only rules are that the book is generally available at the library and ideally no more than 400 pages long. Slott broke both with his choice of the obscure 1974 science fiction novel The Mote in God's Eye, by Larry Niven and Jerry Pournelle (592 pages in some editions!) / "It's my job to lower the bar," Slott joked ...' (Maggie Penman, The Washington Post, 4 May) [PL]

ART BOOK The Space Cat by Nnedi Okorafor & Tana Ford. NONFICTION Enshittification by Cory Doctorow.

The Long 19th Century. 'Mary Shelley's Frankenstein (1818) was written two centuries before the works of Wells and Verne....' (Catherine Riley and Lynne Pearce, Feminism and Women's Writing, 2018) [RB] • On shaven armpits in the new Wuthering Heights film: 'Per Gillette UK, English women began removing hair from their face and body with safety razors in the early 1900s, after the First World War – several centuries after Brontë's novel was published in 1847.' (People.com, 25 May) [RB]

Publishers and Sinners. Gollancz's SF Gateway, the vast ebook sales website launched in 2011 along with the online SF Encyclopedia, has stagnated for years (latest 'news' post August 2021; 'random' SFE sample entry stuck on Michael Scott Rohan since 2018, even after SFE links were officially severed in October 2021) and seems to have died. The last valid Internet Archive snapshot – normally three or four every month – was on 8 March 2026. Ansible asked Orion/Gollancz if this was the end: no reply as yet. Where will eager readers find digital Badger Books now?

The Way the Future Was. 'It was a square metal cabinet that held every scientific book and monograph of value that had ever been published, reduced to microfilm which could be read through a special apparatus.' (Edmond Hamilton, Calling Captain Future, 1967) [BA]

By Any Other Name. Q: ‘In anagrams, the name of which Greek god is an anagram of “rose”?’ A: ‘Athena.’ (BBC1, The Weakest Link) [PE]

Awards in Progress. British Fantasy shortlists have been released: see britishfantasy.org/the-british-fantasy-awards-2026-shortlists/.

● Arthur C. Clarke: there’s a record-length submissions list of 132 books from 52 eligible imprints and independent authors. The shortlist will be revealed on 4 June (see events list).

One Coin to Rule Them All. To mark a vital anniversary in British civic history – 25 years since Peter Jackson’s first Lord of the Rings film – the Royal Mint has released a 50p coin ‘Forged not in the fires of Mount Doom but in Wales’, featuring the One Ring, its lettering, and the Eye of Sauron. Six more will follow. (BBC, 20 May) What next? Donald Trump?

The Dead Past. 10 Years Ago, from the critical heritage: ‘People buy romance novels, sci-fi and other genres because they know they will encounter no unhappiness, no depression, no angst, no killings, no family conflict, etc., the way they will in all of modern fiction. (New York Times Book Review)’ ... ‘The Handmaid’s Tale was a dystopia about the oppression of women by a feminist Canadian novelist from outside of the genre. (Foundation)’ (Ansible 347, June 2016) ● 70 Years Ago, Eric Frank Russell rebutted a hideous slur: “‘Vargo Statten’ is not (repeat: NOT), never was and never will be (repeat: NEVER) a pen-name of Eric Frank Russell.’ For safety’s sake he also denied in similar terms that Eric Frank Russell was a pen-name of Vargo Statten. (Fantasy Times 248, June 1956)

Random Fandom. Fanac.org has moved its photo archive to a new subsite at photos.fanac.org, currently with more than 8,500 images. [MP]

Fanfundery. European Fan Fund: Hephæstion Christophoulos of Greece won the five-candidate race to the Berlin Eurocon, MetropolCon on 2-5 July 2026 (effund.github.io, 4 May). No voting figures have been released. ● TAFF Ebook Library. The latest title, added in a fit of nostalgia and self-indulgence, is Charles Platt’s humorous Micromania: The Whole Truth about Home Computers (1984, as adapted by me for the UK), with a brand-new Platt foreword and Langford afterword. Free PDF download at taff.org.uk/ebooks.php?x=Micromania. Illustrations by Carl Lundgren. For those who prefer hard copy there’s also a TAFF-benefit paperback.

Magazine Scene. Sci-Fi Ireland edited by Mark Mullan, an sf short story magazine to be published twice a year, was launched in May: see www.sci-fi-ireland.com. ● Another May debut is Rachel Cordasco’s Small Planet: The SF in Translation Magazine, free at www.sfintranslation.com. ● FIYAH: Magazine of Black Speculative Fiction is ‘going on hiatus indefinitely’ after issue #40, for financial reasons. (Bluesky, 21 May) [F770]

Chog’s Masterclass. Risus Sardonicus. ‘Don’s smile was a lemon twist.’ (Emil Petaja, The Nets of Space, 1969) ● Frothy Dept. ‘Lucael staggered back against the wall of the building beside them, his face working like yeast.’ (Keith Laumer, Retief’s Ransom, 1971) [BA] ● The Eureka Moment. “‘It’s worked at last,” he shouted. “At last I’ve discovered a magnet which will attach itself as near as possible to gravity when electrified.”’ (Desmond Wilcox, Into Existence, 1941) ● Eyeballs in the Sky. ‘Guin clicked the tab shut and pushed herself back from the counter. Let her eye run out the windows and on to the high far frill of upper Manhattan.’ (Melissa Albert, The Children, 2026) [GVG] ● Advice on Good Parenting. ‘It is related that a father plunged his infant babe, only a few hours old, into the water for several minutes, and repeated this operation daily, until the child could remain under water twenty minutes, moving and playing without harm, like a fish. Parents should remember this and learn how to develop their children properly on dry land.’ (Mary Baker Eddy, Science and Health, 1875; final edition of 1910)
